The Coming Investigation. The proposed investigation into the alleged election frauds committed in Florida and Louisiana, is now squarely before the House, and though the Republicans by skillful fillibustering tactics may delay the passage of the resolution for a while, it must ultimately go through, as the Democrats have, with more unanimity than was expected, joined in its support, and the absent members of the party will doubtless be back before many hours to make up the needed quorum. The Republicans, it will be seen, are making their fight in behalf of an amendment extending the investigation to Oregon, Mississippi, and other States where Democratic election frauds are charged. The Democrats express a willingness to vote for the additional investigation as a separate measure, but not as an amendment to their investigation scheme. The demand for the investigation, as declared in the preamble of the Potter resolution, is based upon the resolutions passed by the Legislature of Maryland, upon the recent affidavit of Samuel B. McLin, ex-Secretary of State of Florida, and chairman of the State canvassing board, and other published statements implicating ex-Governor Noyes, of Ohio, now minister to France, and the Hon. John Sherman, of Ohio, now Secretary of the Treasury, in guilty knowledge and connivance in the frauds by which the electoral votes of Florida and Leuisiana were secured for Mr. Haves. It is declared in the preamble that the gravity and particularity of the charges, the high official position of the persons implicated, the dignity and importance of the Presidential office, the honor of the nation and the truth of history all combine to make investigation a duty in order that the facts may be ascertained and known. The resolution accordingly provides for a select committee of eleven members of the House, with power to send for persons and papers, to administer oaths, to conduct the investigation at such places as may be necessary, with leave to sit during the recess and to report at any time.

There is no mention or suggestion in the resolution that any attempt is to be made. under it, to unseat President Hayes. It seems to have been cautiously worded to avoid creating any public alarm, or having any revolu tiouary purposes, but for all that a good many people will say if the investigation is to have no results in case frauds are established, why stir up the cess-pool? Mr. Hayes has been placed in the Presidential chair by a tribunal from whose decision there is no appeal. Any attempt to unseat him will be revolutionary; and if he were unseated it would not place Tilder in the chair. Merely as a matter of political policy there are many long-headed democrats who doubt if they will not lose quite as much campaign capital as they will gain in an investigation which will perhaps show up democratic frauds in Mississippi and Oregon quite as flagrant as any republican frauds in Florida and Louisiana. However, the investigation is destined to go on, and let us trust it will not lead to a revival of the Presidential turmoil, but be confined to the work of establishing "the truth of history."

While there are some tolerable arguments in favor of the Senate amendment to the District bill providing for the election of a District delegate to Congress, there are stronger ones against it. For one thing, the District delegate would almost inevitably be elected by a political party; and a party representative in Congress could do us little service. Again, a delegate without a vote is a cipher in Congress. If he undertakes to champion the cause of the District, he does not get the ear of the House, and commands little consideration from any quarter. Who can doubt that the members of the District committee, Messrs. Blackburn, Hunton and Hendee, who carried the District bill through the House with such tact and ability were vastly more influentia' with that body than a District delegate could possibly have been? We think it will be better to leave the management of our interests in the hands of an influential House committee rather than to devolve them upon a so-called representative, who, without vote or influence, is powerless to carry any legislation.

It seems that the loss of the Allan steamship Sardinian, from the explosion of gases generated from bituminous coal and confined in the bunkers where the coal was carried, is the first disaster of importance which has befallen the Messrs. Allan since the remarkable series of losses which happened during their connection with the Montreal Ocean Steamship Company. This unfortunate company lost within the four years from 1859 to 1863 four steamers, at d of the passengers over five hundred were drowned. It is to be hoped that after a long freedom from accidents, the Sardinian explosion does not mark the beginning of a new series of calamities.

Mr. Vallarta, the Mexican minister of foreign relations, under whose administration of affairs the recognition of the Diaz government by the United States has been, with difficulty, obtained, is now having trouble nearer home It seems that besides being premier he is chief justice of the supreme court, license having been granted him to abstain from court duties This license has now been withdrawn, and he is compelled to choose between the two positions. He does not wish to leave the premiership before the complete settlement of the American question, and as chief justice he is heir to the executive in case of a vacancy. His candidacy for the next Presidency must also be taken into consideration in the decision. Consequently his position is exceedingly em-

Commenting upon the announcement that some hopeful gentlemen are about to start another newspaper in Washington, the Baltimore Gazette (Mr. Cockerell?) remarks

"If they were shrewd business men they would wait until the war between Russia and England breaks out, buy a privateer and go into the business of sweeping British commerce from the ocean. That would be fully as exciting and almost as profitable as running a | Corcoran Building, opp. U. S. Treasury. newspaper in Washington.

Every day increases the reasons why Russia should insist on some decisive determination of the questions at issue. To internal troubles with Nihilist conspiracies, financial difficalties, and the unconcealed dissatisfaction of Roumania, there are now added the Bulgarian revolts, the increasing strength of the Turkish army around Constantinople, and the certainty of a frightful mortality among the Russian soldiers, similar to that which swept away 60,000 in 1823, if the Turkish summer overtakes the army on the deadly plains of the lower Danube. It will not do to stand still. It may be doubted, however, whether Russia's calamities, present and prospective, do not all things considered, drive her towards war rather than towards peace. It may be thought that a struggle with a powerful enemy like Great Britain, will firmly unite the people through patriotism and obliterate the revolutionary sentiments which are cropping out in parts of the empire.

The inhabitants of Smyrna are furnished a brand new version of the recent Turco-Russian war by a proclamation in one of their official journals. From this document it appears that Russia was worsted in every battle: that the Czar was compelled to send his brother to Constantinople to make submission and sue for peace; that the Sultan finally granted pardon to the conquered, but retained 50,000 Russians at Constantinople as hostages. We wonder what the intelligent Smyrnaites think about the silver bill.

They do say that a party by the name of Blaine is engineering the operations of the House republicans in their skillful fillibustering fight against the Potter resolution,
